

THE ROUNDHOUSE FOUNDATION

The Roundhouse Foundation (Community Organization). The Roundhouse Foundation, founded by local artist Kathy Deggendorfer, began offering grants for educational and community efforts in Sisters in 2002. Since that time, the Foundation has grown in size and scope and now supports creative solutions for challenges across Oregon's rural and Indigenous communities.

The Foundation is still headquartered in Sisters located on the historic Pine Meadow Ranch Center for Arts & Agriculture, a 260-acre, working, regenerative ranch just south of town. In addition to the land serving as a living laboratory, the Foundation hosts artists, scholars, and conservationists every year to be inspired by the area and, in turn, to inspire the community.

For the past several years, the Roundhouse Foundation has dedicated itself to improving the lives of rural Oregonians and the environment. Those who attended school in Sisters, or enjoyed the Sisters Folk Festival, experienced the Sisters Outdoor Quilt Show, or explored the High Desert Museum, are among the thousands who have benefitted from the extensive efforts and generosity of the Roundhouse Foundation.
